We have designed Library Search to be the best starting point possible for your research. It will return results containing academic books, ebooks and journal articles, as well as CDs, DVDs, conference proceedings, theses and reference works.

If you want to go into a bit more depth, you should also try using the ‘Find E-Journals’ and ‘Find Databases’ options from the top bar – the rest of this guide explains how to do that.

Library Search works like Google – so it will assume an ‘AND’ in between each search term. You can use quotation marks to search for a phrase, e.g. “Social media” or try using Advanced Search.

Click ‘view and request a copy’ to request an item on loan be put on hold for you.

This Shelf location of this book is HM851 FUC.

Use the options on the left to find particular sources e.g. ‘ebooks’ or articles from ‘Academic Journals’.

To view journal articles click on ‘PDF full text’ link or ‘UEA Access’.

Access more library services, including your Library Account, from the top bar.
Use the A-Z of e-journals to find out if we have a journal available online, and which years you can access. This can be very useful if you are looking for a specific journal article, for example:

1. Enter the journal title in the search box. From our example this is Active learning in higher education. Click ‘Search’.

2. Click on the ‘Get UEA access...’ link to link out to the journal.

Tip: Note that we may have the same journal from different providers, and that coverage dates may vary. Make sure you choose a provider that gives access to the date you need.

Tip: If the year you need isn’t available electronically, remember to check and see if it is in print in the library.
If you want to access other databases to search beyond Library Search, or if you want to access a specific resource, use the ‘Find Databases’ option to generate a list of resources for your subject.
