Background

In the new University's Academic Appeals and Complaints Regulations it was always the intention that where a Stage 2 appeal is upheld due to a failure of the Exam Board to correctly follow the requirement of the Faculty Academic Appeals and Complaints Panel (FACP) that it could go straight back to the Board rather than the FACP.

Discussion

In order to ensure that this is correctly reflected in the Academic Appeals and Complaints Regulations it is proposed to insert the following regulation:

12.2.1 Where the procedural irregularity giving rise to the Stage 2 appeal being upheld relates to a failure by a Board of Examiners to follow the requirements and/ or recommendations of the FACP fully and properly the Chair of the relevant FACP shall be advised that there is no need for a further consideration by the FACP and that the matter has been referred back to the Board of Examiners.
